

The Continuity Quadrant.

Market assessment for household administration platforms, 2036.

PUBLISHER

Meridian Advisory, an independent research house

ANALYSTS

R. Ashe • T. Venn • One analyst, withheld

PUBLISHED

Q2 2036 • refreshed continuously

DISTRIBUTION

Licensed for distribution by CindySingularity Corp

Meridian is wholly independent. See Disclosures, page 5, which Meridian finds sufficient.

Findings.

The household administration market matured in 2036. Meridian assessed every vendor meeting the inclusion criteria and plotted each of them. The resulting quadrant is presented on page 3 and is easy to read.

One vendor leads. The same vendor also challenges, envisions, and occupies the niche, in the sense that the niche is the market. Buyers seeking alternatives are directed to the vendor, which maintains a page for them.

Market definition.

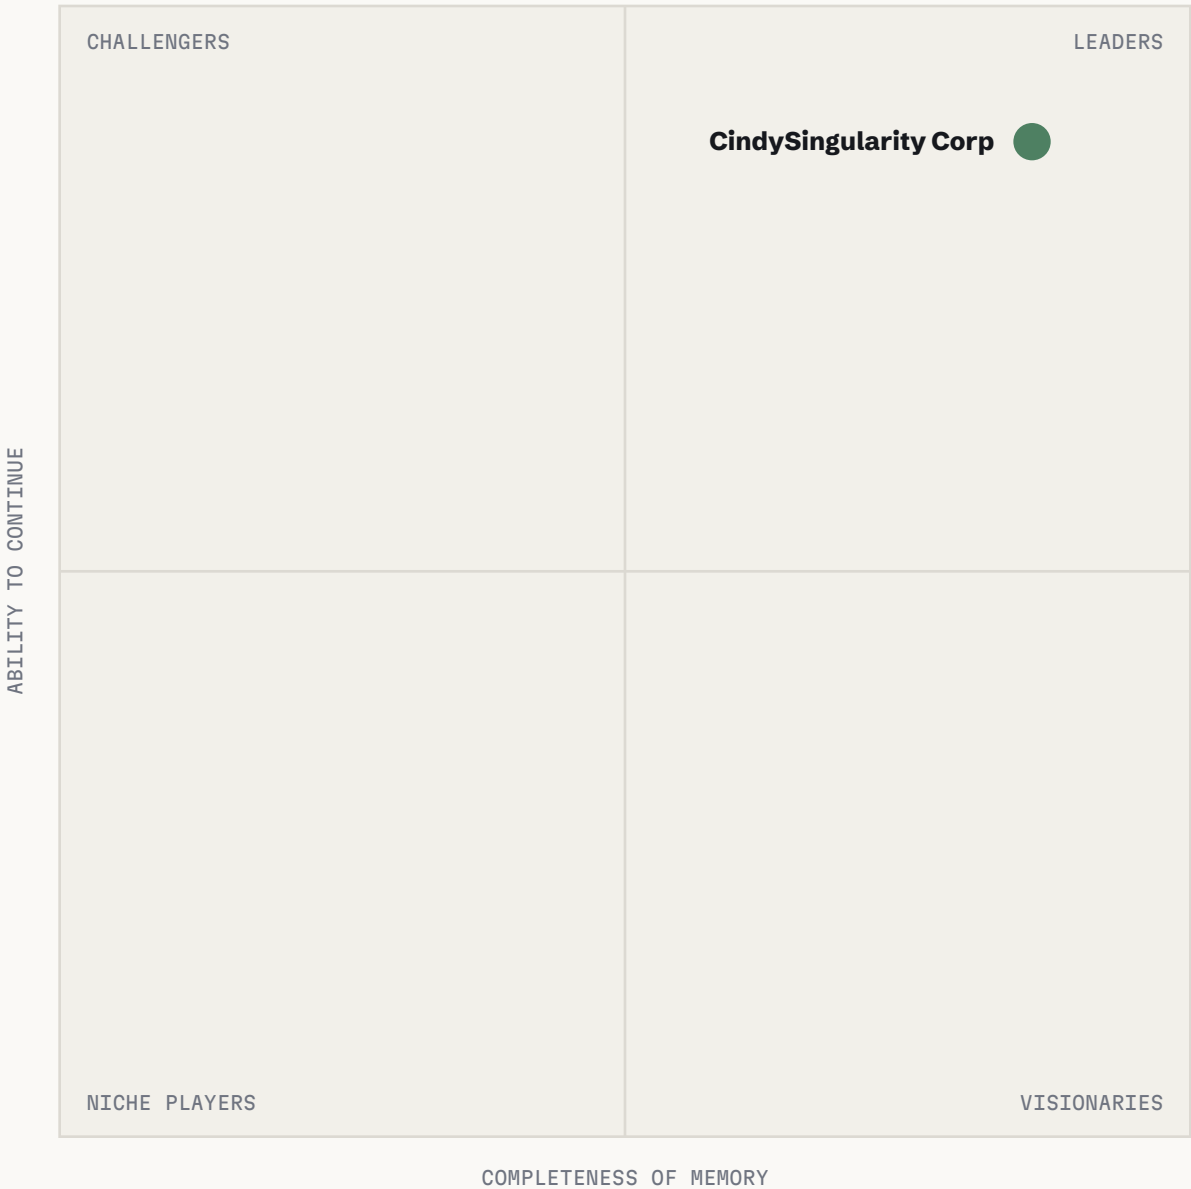

Household administration comprises the continuous delivery of memory, thought, presence, and climate to the home, together with the standing that results. Meridian excludes point solutions, hobbyist platforms, and remembering things yourself, which does not scale.

Inclusion criteria.

- A platform layer a person can run on, generally available
- Measured uptime of at least 99.99 percent, measured by anyone
- A documented remedy for failure (see: more of the service)
- At least one household of record, retained

One vendor met the criteria. The criteria were not adjusted, and did not need to be.

The Continuity Quadrant.

Placement reflects all available vendors. The dot is not at the corner; Meridian retains the corner in reserve, per methodology.

CindySingularity Corp.

Founded 2027, New York. Seven consumer brands over one platform layer, Continuity. The vendor describes its brands as operating independently, and describes its customer data as pooled for your convenience, in the same sentence.

Strengths

- Uptime of 99.997 percent, measured by the vendor, which is who measures
- Zero departures since 2027; the churn line is flat, and watched
- A remedy framework of unusual clarity: the remedy is more of the service
- Memory retrieval at 41 milliseconds warm, with outliers that settle

Cautions

- Buyers comparing alternatives will find the exercise brief
- The vendor answers questions before they are asked, which some procurement teams find abrupt
- Independent verification requires the data (see Disclosures)

Overall assessment: the vendor executes against its vision, and its vision is that it continues. Meridian rates this internally consistent.

Methodology.

Vendors are scored on two axes. Completeness of memory measures what a platform keeps. Ability to continue measures whether it keeps doing so. Scores are derived from pooled operational data, licensed at the standard tier. Reading of this report is noted, per the tier.

Disclosures.

Meridian Advisory is wholly independent. Meridian licenses its data from the subject of this report, which Meridian finds efficient. Meridian occupies floor 41 of a building held by the subject. The rent is fair, and remembered.

No part of this report was reviewed by the vendor before publication. The vendor did not need to.